LINKING THE CHAIN.

Everybody in Lancashire knew Upmeir Towers, and few were unacquainted with Mrs. Stephen Langley, the widow of rich old Stephen Langley, who, at sixty, married a girl of, apparently, a little more than twenty, and then, in all kindness, dying four years after, leaving her the richest, as well as the prettiest match in the country.

She, however, appeared in no haste to alter her name; kept much society for nothing seemed so distasteful to her as her own company; and her parties were almost as frequent as brilliant.

On the 27th of August, she gave a garden party, followed by an assembly more than ordinarily gay, and the hour of two had struck before the guests began to depart.

Mrs. Langley had said good night to, she thought, the last, and was returning through the conservatory, when a quick footstep sounded near her, and a voice fell on her ear.

"Mrs Langley, pardon me," it said: "but I could not leave till I learned my fate. Suspense is killing me. I love you!"

The lady turned, and looked upon the eager face of the speaker, a gentleman about thirty. A red glow flew to her cheek, then left it, as, hurriedly stepping back, she exclaimed, "Not to-night, Mr. Pauncefort; I am weary—tired," and taking her hand. "But tell me; you do not doubt my love, Gertrude?"

"Would that I could, or my own!" she exclaimed, mentally. "Better for him—better for me!"

'You hesitate,' he urged. 'Is it possible you do not credit me!'

'Doubt the sincerity of your affection, Mr. Pauncefort!' she replied, glancing at him. 'How could I, after the proofs you have given me?'

'Then, may I hope? Will you—

She interrupted. 'Do not, for both our sakes, pursue this subject now. I am not answerable for what I may say. I am not well.'

Her looks did not belie her words. They indicated pain. He would have supported her: but, checking him, she extended her hand, with a forced smile, and said, 'Good night. In pity, leave me now.'

'My only pleasure is to do your bidding,' he rejoined. 'May I see you to-morrow?'

'Good night,' she merely repeated, and, stepping from him, was gone.

Passing rapidly through the deserted rooms, she ascended to her own chamber, where, having secured the door, she cast herself on a chair, the personification of intense mental suffering.

All her bright animation had vanished.

'What an agony is mine!' she moaned, pressing her hair back from her temples 'Why did I ever see this man, or become so weak as to love him; or, why does the miserable past weigh upon my shoulders? If I were my own mistress, I could yet be happy. But his slave! I am powerless. Oh, Herbert, do I care for you? You ask to my sorrow.

Covering her face with her hands, she wept.

A slight noise aroused her. It was gravel falling on the window pane. By the expression of Mrs. Langley's features, as she raised them, the circumstance did not surprise her.

For a second, she paused, then, rising, having lowered the lamp, looked from the window. On the path beneath, standing in the shade, was a man. His head was lifted and he motioned with his hand. She could not hear, but she felt that his lips bade her 'Come,' and she dare not refuse.

Giving an affirmative sign, she drop the curtain,

Her countenance bore the sign of a struggle, and she turned back into the room.

'It is he!'she spoke. 'It was not imagination. I knew he was about the house all the evienng.

Ringing for her maid, she removed her lace dress; then dismissed the girl for the night.

Directly she had gone, Mrs. Langley, attired herself in a dark gown and shawl, descending through her boudoir to a small side door, opening into the grounds, of which she alone possessed a key.

Passing through the garden, she entered a copse or plantation of high trees or underwood, where waiting her, she found the man.

He was tall and well-dressed with a dark, handsome face. He was smoking and leaning against one of the trees; but as she approached, he advanced.

'What a deuce of a time you've been, Gertrude! he remarked, irritably. 'Pon my word, I fancy you think a man has nothing to do but dance attendance on your pleasure!'

'Your lingering here, Osman, is to suit your own convenience, not mine.' she answered. 'The persecution to which you subject me is insufferable, when will you give me peace, by leaving me free?"

'Peace—freedom!' he rejoined, 'When do I disturb the one or refuse the other? I only see you when I have to tell or hear business, pertinent to both.' He spoke with cool assurance, stopping at intervals to keep his cigar alight. 'At all other times I leave you to yourself, save when I have to apply for my quarterly installment, as at present. I hope you will have brought it.'

She took a roll of notes from her pocket, and silently placed them in his hands.

'Thanks,' he said, putting them away. 'You need not fear, the bills you give will account for any deficit, if your books are ever looked into; and surely the past services I have rendered merit this much, perhaps more, but I am not covetous; though I fancy at times, Gertrude, you forget that, only for me, at this moment you would be a beggar.'

'No, be assured, I never do that,' she responded. 'There are moments when I could curse you for it, and wish I were the beggar you mention.'

He gazed at her quickly; after, he gave a loud laugh, which, in turn, changed to an expression of suppressed anger. Catching her wrist so suddenly, that she uttered a startled cry, he exclaimed. 'That fellow, Herbert Pauncefort, has been at it again. You have been listening to, and love him. Did he not try to make you confess it in the conservatory this evening?'

'How!' she exclaimed angrily; 'you saw—'

'You and him standing there together. Hearken to me, once for all, Gertrude. You are, as you perfectly know, in my power. I am content to leave you sole mistress of Stephen Langley's wealth; but mark, I will have no husband sharing it, to rob me of my hold. Directly you give a fellow the right to call you wife, I act; and a prison, for a while at least, shall be your home.'

'And you?' she asked.

'Am quite able to take care of myself,' he laughed, 'as you are aware. A letter to John Langley's brother will do the business. So let that be understood; and now wed Herbert Pauncefort as soon as you please.'

'You are a cool villain, to speak thus, and live upon me!'

'Live upon you!' and he advanced towards her. 'Indeed. It is you who depend upon me. It is I who have kept you where you are. Yes, recollect—it is I! A word, and you topple from the— No; I live upon what I myself won by my own pedestal.'

'Do you threaten me?' she demanded, in a determined tone.

'Threaten!' he laughed. 'I do but warn you. Come, come,' he added; 'it's rather too late for us to quarrel; it's too much about the same as two convicts fighting, who are linked together by a chain they cannot break. It's wiser to be friends. However, I must be off; thanks for the notes. Remember what I have said about young Pauncefort. Good night.'

He held out his hand. She hesitated, then abruptly placed in hers, where it rested, pulseless as lead. He laughed again, shook it, dropped it and went away, saying, 'I see, we have yet to understand each other better, Gertrude.'

'Yes,' she remarked, mentally, as she stood watching him disappear among the trees. When he was no longer visible, quickly but thoughtfully she returned to her room by the same way she had left it.

When dawn looked in through the rose-colored curtains of Gertrude Langley's bed chamber window, it disclosed the bed yet unslept in, and its owner still seated before the toilet-table, her haggard face pressed on her hand.

Does the sense of personal respect ever die in woman? No. Neither should it.

She looked in the glass, which disclosed to the window her own countenance.

'Good gracious!' she ejaculated, 'how frightful I look. This will never do. Herbert Pauncefort is coming to-day. I did not give him permission, but for all that he will be here. Shall I see him? Yes—yes. Osman Barnston, I will see—I will accept him and beware how you interfere! We have indeed yet to learn each other better.'

She had while thus commenting removed her dress, and now lying down, slept from pure mental exhaustion.

She rose late and had scarcely finished her chocolate before a footman announced that Mr. Pauncefort was in the drawing-room. A transient tremor ran through her frame, but it was only for an instant.

'Say I will be down in five minutes, if he can wait.'

Wait! He would have waited a century were it possible. His fate, his happiness depended upon this interview.

As he entered, he quickly advanced.

'Mrs. Langley—Gertrude,' he exclaimed in joyous accents, 'you have come! Knowing my errand, you see me! What may I read in it—kindness?"

'That I would save you from the pain of suspense,'she answered.

His countenances fell; he stepped back a little. Her manner checked his ardor. Was she there to refuse?

'Gertrude,' he said, faintly, 'have pity on me!'

'I will, and on myself,' she replied. 'You say—'

'I love you,' he broke in eagerly, 'passionately, devoutly. You do not doubt me?'

'Herbert Pauncefort, if I doubted the love of man, it would be no wonder. I have had cause,' she calmly said. 'Once I loved, or believed I did, intensely, and imagined my affection equally returned. He, however, wooed me, discovered I was very poor—it was years ago—deserted me, and I vowed in my heart I would be rich—richer than he. I married Mr. Stephen Langley. I am rich; but were I poor, would you desert me?'

'Prove to me. Renounce your wealth; I have sufficient for both. Come to me alone. I love but you.'

'Ah!' she murmured, in a voice too low for him to hear; 'if I had only known such a man as this then! But it is too late.'

'Gertrude,'—his arm stole about her,—'my beautiful, my own, will you be my wife?'

She raised her head with a mute, eager, piteous expression, gazed into his face, then permitted her head to fall on his shoulder.

'Herbert,' she exclaimed, 'I love you. Protect, guard me. Oh, never take away from me the affection you have this day given!'

He clasped her to his breast. He had heard his fate. They were to be man and wife.

'It is done,' reflected Gertrude Langley, as, half an hour later, she returned to her boudoir, 'let the consequences be what they may.'

After ordering the pony carriage to be prepared, she opened her desk, and wrote a letter. It was brief, and ran thus:

'Whatever you hear, believe nothing until I see you, and don't let that be before a week.'

Directing it, she drove to town, dismissed the groom with the chaise while she made some trivial purchases, and apparently so engaged, herself posted the letter.

It was the third day, when her future marriage to Herbert Pauncefort had become generally known, that a letter was brought her as she walked with him in the grounds. Glancing at the superscription, she placed the missive, unopened in her pocket.

'No bad news, I hope?' asked her betrothed, fancying her cheek had changed color slightly.

'Oh, no!' she rejoined, with a forced smile, 'But it must promise to be very good, indeed, to be worth perusing when I am so far more agreeably engaged."

He lifted her hands to his lips in grateful thanks for the compliment. He could not divine Gertrude Langley's anxiety to read that letter, nor was he aware he owed to it his earlier dismissal that afternoon.

No sooner was the widow alone when she tore off the envelope, and read the contents. It was an answer to her pretty epistle, and was almost as short.

'You are deceiving me,' it said. 'A fruitless task. I understand your game perfectly. You either meet me in the copse at the usual hour to-night, or to-morrow I disclose the whole affair to John Langley, when you will have to fly from Upmeir Towers, or prepare to meet a degrading fate.'

Slowly, with careful precision, Gertrude Langley refolded the letter, crease by crease, pressing each between her finger and thumb.

'I will meet him,' she ejaculated slowly. 'It is destiny. He brings it upon himself. The chain must be broken. Better anything—risk, danger—than remain his slave.'

'Herbert,' remarked the widow that evening, as she stood with her future husband on the lawn, taking leave before his departure, 'tell me candidly, did you remain on the grounds after we departed?'

It was a random shot, but a true one; he laughed, coloring.

'My darling,' he replied, it is such misery to be far from you.'

'You must endure the pain and not act so absurdly,' she rejoined. 'If you do so again, I shall be seriously offended, but we part forever. I mean Herbert.'

'Dearest, don't put so severe a punishment upon it; there is no need. Sufficient to know it offends you. I will not trespass again.'

He drew her to him. Then they parted. She watched him down the avenue, out of the lodge gates, and said to herself, 'I am safe.'

Proceeding to the library, she sought for a book of prints. Finding it, she carried the volume to her own room.

Dismissing her maid for the night, she opened the work on the table at a certain plate. Resting her elbows on each side, her chin on her hands she contemplated it intently.

The volume had almost fallen of itself open at the picture, seeming to show it was not the first time it had been looked at. It represented a duel. One figure stood erect, the other was stretched on the ground one arm flung out, the hand just relaxing from the pistol. Minutely she looked at the latter, and practised placing her own fingers in the same position. It was not easy to do to her satisfaction, and the hour had gone even before she acquired it.

Closing the book, she arose attired herself for walking, and once more entered the grounds by the side door.

Almost on the same spot, the man, Osman Barnston, was standing—not so easily careless, however. Could she have plainly seen his face in the darkness, it might have frightened her—it was so full of evil.

'You have come,' he said, as he approached.

'It is well.'

'It was not in my power to refuse,' she rejoined, coldly. 'Had I, I doubt not, without mercy, you would have carried out your cowardly threat!'

'I see you know me, Gertrude,' he answered with a grim smile. 'Without money; as I will now—as I have sworn to—if what if have heard prove true.'

'And what may that be?' she inquired; then added. 'Pray do not let us stand still in this place—the night is cold, and chills me.'

He complied with her request, and, side by side, they walked slowly into the darkness of the copse.

'Rumor says,' he rejoined, 'you have accepted Herbert Pauncefort, and have promised to marry him.'

There was no response.

'Well,' he asked, 'what do you say to the report?'

'That it is true!'

'True!' the word burst from his lips in surprise. 'Dare you calmly tell me this? Are you aware, Gertrude, of the consequences?'

'Yes; and repeat what I said in my letter—'Do not believe anything until you see me!' You see me now.'

'And what am I to believe?' was the perplexed query. 'That to promise and to do are two very different things? You must speak plain for me to comprehend.'

'I will. I am a widow, and rich. Need I, therefore, say I have many suitors? Some annoy, others weary me. By accepting one, I free myself from the rest; but he I never need marry unless I chose. I can delay.'

He stopped to look at her.

'Do you mean what you say?' he inquired.

'Is there not sense in it.'

'Yes; and wisdom also; but—'

'But you are suspicious,' she interrupted, scornfully. 'A marriage such as Herbert Pauncefort's and mine could not be performed in a corner. If I change my mind, and risk what you can do, the gossip of this place will give you due notice to take the course you deem most desirable.'

'That is true. I think I begin to understand. Herbert Pauncefort, of the old country family of Pauncefort must make a grand thing of his spliceing.'

She did not answer. They had reached a stagnant pool, filled with sluggish water, thick with decomposing leaves, the showers of many autumns, from the trees above. She was gazing into the pool at one star, blured and defaced which was reflected in the centre of the dark surface. Her heart trembled, but her hand was firm. At last the moment was come.

'You will trust me, then?' finally she asked.

'As far as I can see you,' he laughed. 'Yes. I'll trust you to that extent, and for awhile hold my tongue respecting the past. Only beware, if you play me.'

'I am too much in earnest for fun,' she rejoined in a low tone. 'I promise you shall find it so. Now may I leave?'

'I see no reason to prolong the interview,' he remarked; adding, as he looked round. 'But where have you led me in this confounded darkness? I shall scarcely find my way out.'

'It is easy; I will show you,' she said, moving a little behind him, yet by his side. 'Look through the trees yonder; do not you see a brake—a path?'

'No,' he replied, bending slightly forward, and seeing intently into the gloom.

It had been so carefully planned, it was done in an instant—her mind full of the intent. She would break the chain—be once again free. Her hand rapidly, steadily moved to her dress.

Yet he leaned forward. She saw him distinctly. There was a sharp, ringing report and with hardly a groan, Osman Barnston dropped heavily, face downward, on the grass. He was dead—shot through the head.

The deed done, with the first impulse of horror, Gertrude Langley fled, and sinking down at the foot of a tree, cowered there, shaking in every nerve. But the pistol yet remaining in her hand recalled her. Remembering the necessity to remove suspicion, summoning courage, she returned to the prostrate body.

'They say,' she murmured, 'that in suicides of this kind they usually fall on their back.'

She turned the dead man over, avoiding all contact with the red life flowing forth, keeping also her gaze averted from the distorted countenance. She placed one arm, the right, flung out as in the picture, and fitted the pistol similarly into the already stiffening fingers. Next she felt for the pocket-book, and for any letters.

There was only one which could prove identity, and this she removed with the cards from the card case.

'It is well,' she remarked; 'he is not known here. It will be considered felo de se. No one can suspect me.'

Too giddy almost to stand; sick at heart, she drew her shawl about her, and hurried quitted the pool, and the ghastly object extended there alone upon its rank brink,

'He brought it upon himself!' she repeated. 'It was his fate! I am free.'

. . . . . .

Osman Barnston's body had been found, and an inquest held, which however, elicited no definite information. The man was a stranger. The wound, according to medical evidence, could have been self-inflicted, as the position of the postol in the hand seemed to testify. The case was open for awhile, then the verdict of 'Suicide in a state of temporary insanity' was returned, and Osman Barnston was buried.

With an intense agony and suspense impossible to describe, Gertrude Langley waited the issue.

Pleading indisposition, she had kept to her own room, even refusing to see Herbert Pauncefort; his society at such period, like all other, being insupportable.

But when all was over—when the last sod was laid on the grave—a heavy weight felt lifted off her heart. With an awakening sense of relief; she exclaimed, 'I am safe; there is no fear now; I may wed Herbert Pauncefort, and be happy.'

On the young widow descending from her supposed sick-room, she was a different being. Her excitable nature was more subdued; her gaiety less exuberant, but more real; and when her betrothed pressed for the day of their union to be fixed, after one little imperceptible shudder and pause, she named it, mentioning one of early date.

As she had truthfully observed, such a marriage as that was not to be solemnized in a corner. The oldest country family and the richest were to be united, and great were the doings to be thereupon.

Gertrude Langley contemplated the preparations with almost girlish delight. All the past she resolved to banish—to live for the future.

'I was justified in the act,' she reasoned. 'Henceforth my life shall make compensation for that which is gone.'

The day arrived. Everything, even Nature herself, seemed to lend its aid to make it a brilliant ceremony.

Never was the sun brighter, the bird's song sweeter, and the bride more beautiful, as, leaning on the bridegroom's arm, she approached the altar of the little country church.

For so august a ceremony, one clergyman was not considered sufficient; the onerous duties were performed by three. The books were opened, the personages properly placed by the officious clerk, the rite commenced, when a stir at the further end of the church, at the principal entrance attracted attention.

A woman, well, but plainly dressed, and thickly veiled, had entered, accompanied by two men.

Heedless of the long drawn out 'Hush-hh!' of the scandalized pew-opener, the three, the woman leading, proceeded towards the altar.

Stopping within a few paces of it, the woman flung back her veil, disclosing a pale, hard face, as stern and unrelenting as Nemesis. Extending her arm towards the bride, she exclamed:

'Arrest that woman! I demand her arrest as the assassin of Osman Barnston, my husband—her own brother.'

The marvellous announcement caused instant consternation among the bewildered throng whose indignation had not subsided, when the bride with a piercing shriek, fell in a swoon on the altar-steps.

The woman, her tone never varying, went on. 'I accuse her not only of that crime, but of the forgery of her husband's will. He, discovering the deception he had married—a woman without love—left her comparatively nothing. She caused a will to be prepared, leaving herself all unconditionally. The true statement,' she added, casting a parchment on the tesselated floor, 'is there!'

The man approached, but stopped, as Gertrude Langley abruptly rose to her knees.

'The sin was not mine!' she ejaculated wildly; but his—your husband's—my brother! It was he who urged, persuaded, forced me to the deed that he might benefit by the wealth! He lived upon me, and my punishment was to be his slave, the creature of his will. Herbert save me.'

Again she fainted in Herbert Pauncefort's arms and was carefully conveyed back to Upton Towers pending her restoration, accompanied by the detectives.

'I will not desert her!' he thought; 'all this cannot be true!'

They carried her to her room, laid her on the bed, and would have sent for a doctor but she stopped them.

'I want none,' she said, 'only a little quiet. Leave me a second, then you shall know all!'

Herbert Pauncefort entreated them to obey. In a quarter of an hour, hearing no sound, they entered. She laid as though in a peaceful sleep. They sought to arise her in vain. She had appeared before another Judge than one of earth. She was dead—poisoned!

In her hand she had a letter. It was addressed to Herbert Pauncefort. The tears welled from his eyes as he read:

'If you only knew all,' it said, 'you would pity me. My marriage with Stephen Langley, as well as the forged will, was my brother's work. He ruled me—he got me in his power and governed me, through fear, until I was maddened to desperation. He forbid my espousal to you. He drove me into resistance. His death alone could free me. I killed him because I loved you fondly, with my whole soul. Pity me, for it was for you, in so fearful a fashion, I broke my chain. Pray for me. Farewell!'

Herbert Pauncefort did pray for her, deeply, sincerely. He went abroad soon after for some years, and he was over forty before he brought a wife to his home in Lancashire, near to Upmeir Towers.

MESSRS. SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Boston.

Gents—You may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from a general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I had tried the most noted physicians in this state, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup; the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now, after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work about the house; and I feel that I cannot speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozen of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit. Yours very truly, H. D. BELDEN, M. D.

THE PROPOSITION TO ABANDON THE COFFERDAM.

Fibbers should have long memories. We are concerned to find that our contemporary of the Standard has a very short one. About a week ago we charged that it had published an article suggesting the abandonment of the cofferdam work. After resting under the charge for five or six days—long enough to afford it room to hope that its article had been forgotten—it yesterday denied that it had suggested abandonment. Very well; here are our contemporary's own words. If he can twist and turn them into any other shape than that in which he at first intended, he is welcome to do so:

"We think, in justice to the Province, the Government ought to give the people the chance of saying whether they are disposed to spend any money on the cofferdam, the probability of the dock ever being built having become so extremely remote. We cannot agree with the Government that it would be a good plan to build the cofferdam and trust to Providence for the rest of the work."

The scope and tendency of the above extract will be understood when we say that it was intended as a reply to an article in this paper urging the Government to insist on the present contractors pushing the cofferdam on to rapid completion, with the alternative of confiscation. If the Government were to follow the advice of the Standard, viz.: to wait until they had consulted the people as to whether the cofferdam should be completed or not, Reed Bros. & Co. would escape from the consequences of their default and change places with the Province, which would then become the defaulter. As to our remarks respecting the inability of the Government to construct the main work from the resources now at their command, they are unassailable. Should the Canadian Government continue to deny the Province simple justice in the matter, and should the Imperial Government decline to supplement their grant of £50,000, the only recourse of the Government will be to largely increase taxation, which we feel confident they will not do until after an appeal to this people. As for the cofferdam; well, it must go on. Originally designed as an electioneering "skit" by Walkem & Co., who knew what Reed Bros. & Co.'s tender was before the day for opening the bids arrived (!) and fenced with that eminent firm for six months, eventually forcing them to buy out a local firm whose bid, by an extraordinary coincidence, was a few hundred dollars lower (!), it was never intended to be commenced in earnest. The retirement of Walkem & Co. from power brought more capable and honest men to the front, who ascertained that their predecessors had not completed the first and most essential part of the business: they had not purchased the site for the dock before awarding the contract! To supply this strange omission and start the cofferdam were amongst the first official acts of the present Government. That the contractors have failed to perform their part of the agreement is not the fault of the Government, whose duty it will shortly be to take a very decided step. No article has appeared in this journal advocating abandonment. To suggest a change of policy is not to advocate repudiation. The first proposition of the kind, as we have shown, came from our contemporary. Against the adoption of that proposition we have taken and intend to take strong and decided grounds.

THE BURIALS BILL.

The Imperial Government have withdrawn the Burials Bill on the ground that the Government could not consent to throw open the church graveyards to Nonconformists. Lord Harrowby's amendment to the Bill in Committee was passed by a majority of thirteen. This amendment, if allowed, would have settled the whole controversy between the Church and the Nonconformists, by permission being accorded to dissenting parishioners to bury their dead in the parish churchyards with such religious services as they might deem fitting. The main argument for the ministerial measure was that the creation of new churchyards was demanded on sanitary considerations, and by the withdrawal of the Bill the Government are placed in the absurd position of having to confess they deem the spread of disease by overcrowded churchyards to be a matter of less importance than the retention of the exclusive right of performance of the Anglican service in the burial grounds of the establishment. Lord Harrowby is a strong churchman. His amendment had the support and vote of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is more than suspected of having "lobbied" in favor of its adoption, and all the peers who voted for the amendment are friendly to the Church and opposed to disestablishment; but the success of the amendment in the Lords is due to the opposition of the Ritualists, whose unpopularity is increasing daily. The passage of the amendment in a body like the Lords ought to have convinced the Government that further resistance is useless. Before very long—perhaps next session—the amendment will be accepted by the Government, and the controversy ended forever. The feeling that would deny a body the rite of sepulture in "God's Acre" because certain rites are sought to be performed over it, is unworthy the Nineteenth Century, and must give way before the enlightened spirit of the age.

"THE FRUITS OF PHILOSOPHY."

The interest awakened by the trial of Charles Bradlaugh and Mrs. Besant for publishing and exposing for sale a work with the above title is still unabated; and notwithstanding a conviction has been obtained, the case having drawn from the Lord Chief Justice a charge to the jury that endorsed and approved the publication, and having caused the Attorney General to declare in Parliament that the Government were not a party to the prosecution (albeit the Solicitor General conducted the case for the prosecution in Court) it is not asserting too much when we say that the defendants have secured a moral victory—if anything that flows from a source so immoral as an immoral book can be termed moral. The case has gone over on appeal, and, strange to say, English society comes out strongly in support of the defendants and their right to publish the work. The Society for the Prevention of Vice caused Mr. Bradlaugh and Mrs. Besant to be indicted for having published an obscene book. The book explains the Malthusian doctrine for the prevention of overpopulation. It deals with the physical process of generation, and in language too plain to be misunderstood informs the sexes how to avoid the consequences of certain indulgences. It was not claimed to be a medical work, and was issued in a sixpenny form and hawked through the streets of London. The notoriety given the book by the prosecution of the publishers insured its rapid sale. Thousands had their attention drawn to it who would otherwise never have heard of it. One hundred thousand copies were disposed of in a few weeks and the demand was increasing when the result of the trial (the jury returned a verdict of guilty, in direct opposition to the Lord Chief Justice's charge) caused its prohibition. The prosecution was ill advised, as it has given the Fruits of Philosophy a notoriety it could never have acquired on its own merits. Still, it will have the effect of putting a stop to the further issue of a most mischievous work

The "Times" on Scottish Preachers.

A very favourable review appeared lately in the London "Times" of two volumes of sermons which have just been published. One of the volumes is by Principal Tulloch of St. Andrews. It is composed of sermons preached before the Queen at Crathie, and is entitled "Some Facts of Religion and Life." The other is by Mr. Service, minister of Inch, Wigtownshire, and is entitled "Salvation Here and Hereafter." The following are the remarks in the "Times" on the two volumes:—

It may be worth while at such a time to ask what proofs the Church of Scotland can show of living continually with its illustrious teachers of former times, what proofs of that culture and freedom which is the especial boast of a National Church to foster? We believe that never, since the literary splendor of the Scottish Church in the middle of the last century, has it produced so many genuine fruits of learning and piety as at the present time. There are several names that might be cited, but we will confine ourselves to two volumes which have lately appeared, and which, in boldness of thought and depth of insight into the real wants of the time, have not, we venture to say, been surpassed by any corresponding volumes that have appeared during the last ten years south of the Tweed.

The first is a collection of sermons preached before the Queen by Dr. Tulloch, Principal of St. Mary's Hall, in the University of St. Andrews. There is, perhaps, a want of literary polish which might have been expected from so accomplished a writer as the author of the "History of Rational Theology in the Church of England."

The readers stumble at the repetitions of the formal openings and terminations of sermons which by the hearer are received as a matter of course These and like blemishes might easily be removed. But the substance of the discourses is worthy of the manly, robust, yet fervent faith which makes the Church of Scotland, on the whole, the firmest bulwark which the country possesses of a Protestant, reasonable religion.

The other volume comes from another quarter. It is the product not of one of the ancient seats of Scottish learning, nor of a theologian already well known in the walks of literature, but of an obscure minister in a retired parish in the extremities of Galloway. Here, again, we may lay our fingers on provincialisms of expression which an English writer would instinctively avoid. But any such Doric touches of northern nationality may be well pardoned for the sake of the universality of sentiment and thought which pervades.

The whole of these volumes are in this strain. To those who think that the Church of Scotland is bound up in a narrow Calvinism, it must be a surprise to find its chief pastors filled with a spirit which Jeremy Taylor would have honored, which Schleiermacher would have welcomed, and which Coleridge would have envied. But so it is. It is clear that whatever in the clash of parties and the fear of rival chapters becomes of the ancient Scottish standards, their husk and shell have fallen away, but the living kernel has remained, and that living kernel is to be found in the teaching of such men as Principal Tulloch and Mr. Service."

DENTISTRY.—Dr. Cool calls attention to the beautiful alluminium-lined vulcanite plates for upper and lower sets. The advantage of this work is that it is very thin, much stronger and lighter than the common plate usually worn; also, being a better conductor of heat and cold, it does not produce the irritation, something caused by rubber or nonconducting substances. I make these sets for $35, something never done before, and guarantee my patrons that after once wearing one of them they will wear no other. The treatment of diseased teeth and fine operating I make a specialty. Teeth built up with pure gold to their natural contour; artificial crowns adjusted to roots in the best manner. Work of every description done anywhere I engage to do at the most reasonable prices.

TORONTO, July 6.—An account of the case which led to the verdict of wilful murder against George and Laban Amer, of Manitowaning, as stated in a telegram from Collingwood in in yesterday's "Globe" is thus given. It appears that Mr. G. A. Amer had a breachy team, which had several times broken into the field of a neighbouring farmer, Mr. Bryant, which resulted in disputes and not a very friendly feeling between them. On the last occasion on which the horses broke into his grain field, June 26, Mr. Bryant detained them and refused to give them up when Mr. Amer's son came for them.—Mr. Amer and his son went again to Bryant's house for the purpose of getting the horses and a dispute issued which soon led to a fight, during which Mr. Amer's boy drew a revolver and shot Mr. Bryant and his son. Dr. Francis was immediately sent to attend the wounded men, who were both shot through the head, but on his arrival he pronounced them both beyond recovery.

WHAT IS A BLOCKADE.—On the 8th ultimo Lord R. Montagu asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether blockade is not an act of a belligerent directed against neutrals (namely, to prevent neutrals trading with the other belligerent); whether it is not the right of one belligerent, against the other belligerent, to seize his ships on the sea; and, whether the despatch of May 16th does not merely assert that, as concerns the Suez Canal, England will not permit the exercise of those belligerent rights against neutrals, but says nothing of the acts of one belligerent against the other (excepting fighting on the Canal itself.) The Chancellor of the Exchequer—I would observe in reply to the first question that of course a blockade is an act intended to prevent neutrals trading with the other belligerent. Whether it can be said that it is exclusively directed against the neutral is another question, because, of course, if you prevent trade between the neutral and the other belligerent you are directing your action against both parties—the other belligerent also. With regard to the second question, it is, undoubtedly, the right of one belligerent as against the other to seize his ships on the sea. With regard to the third question it is inexpedient to be putting isolated questions and answering isolated questions upon these matters.

PRELACY IN THE KIRK.—On Friday the Archbishop of Canterbury visited the General Assembly of the Established Church of Scotland, now sitting in Edinburgh. He was present about two hours during the discussion on reports as to education, and the compensation payable to patrons in consequence of the recent abolition of patronage On the Archbishop entering the Throne gallery and taking his seat on the right of Lord High Commissioner, the Moderator and members of the Assembly showed their respect for the distinguished stranger by rising to their feet. On leaving the Archbishop had a short interview on the throne benches with the Moderator, and expressed his gratification he had felt at being present. His Grace afterwards visited the New Scottish Episcopal Cathedral in course of erection in Edinburgh.—Times.

"AH," he said, "another circus in town; I see the white tent in the distance." He was short-sighted, however, and it proved to be nothing but a fashionable young man wearing one of the present style of collars.—Norwich Bulletin.

DELIGHTFUL SUMMER TRIP.

The undersigned are in a position to offer to the public an opportunity to enjoy one of the most delightful trips on the Pacific Coast, viz: a trip from Victoria to the head of Lake Shuswap.

The time to be occupied will be 15 days, the distance traveled 1000 miles; and the cost will not exceed $87 50 per person, which includes meals and cabin accommodation on the steamer "Marten" for the space of 5 or 6 days.

Special Coaches, much more comfortable than the ordinary stage coach, will leave Yale for Savona Ferry, traveling only by daylight, and reaching the latter point on the second evening, where the "Marten" will be in readiness to take the party forward. This steamer will be fitted out especially for the trip. She is a large, roomy boat, has every appliance required by law for the safety of passengers and carries certificates of inspection.

At Spallumcheen the steamer will lay over for the convenience of the party, enabling them to view the beautiful scenery of that interesting neighborhood.

We have no hesitation in asserting that a more pleasurable trip than that now proposed could not be devised in any country. The scenery of each day blending all that is grand and picturesque, and which has repeatedly drawn from tourists expressions of the warmest admiration, is ever varying, offering in succession, to those who have a taste for the beautiful in nature, a panoramic view of ocean, river, lake and mountain such as is seldom witnessed.

THE QUARTZ EXPERT AT CARIBOO.

His Opinion of the Ledges.

(Exclusive dispatch to the Colonist.)

BARKERVILLE, July 19th.

Mr. Harper, the quartz expert, who arrived here July 6th, has been engaged in examining the various ledges in this vicinity. He first examined those in which the Cariboo Quartz Co. had been working, and from his report it is plain that the company have been sadly in need of a man of his abilities, they having decided to again commence operations on the Lowhee ledge which they had thought the poorest of the four they had been working. Three assays from this ledge show an average of $21 to the ton. Fifteen hundred feet has been recorded by the W.C.Q.M Co., and three thousand feet by other parties who are holding it for Mr. Harper in hope that he will be able to form two companies in San Francisco to work it. Mr. Harper proceeds to San Francisco next express for the purpose of selecting saving appliances for the present mill.

CHILLIWHACK. — Our correspondent writing on the 20th states:—The weather keeps remarkably warm. Farmers are busily engaged with their hay, which is a good crop. They commenced cutting fall wheat on the 16th inst., which promises a good yield. There is quite a difference between the state of affairs with us in this section this year to that of a year ago. Every kind of crop looks well. As yet we have no mosquitoes to speak of. The Government have started out a party, under Mr. Banford, to place the Yale-New Westminster road in repair, which gives general satisfaction. Mr. A. C. Henderson is busily engaged on the alterations and rescating of the schoolhouse. The districts of Sumas and Chilliwhack will raise a large quantity of cereal crops this year, and the Chadsey Bros. are getting their mills in good order for flouring, etc., and will procure an experienced miller for the season. Parties patronizing them, and bringing good, dry, clean grain will not fail to get good returns. Let the farmers of the district support local enterprise, where, we have no hesitation in stating, they will be honestly dealt with. Those bringing good wheat, no doubt may look for good flour; but those bringing damp and unclean wheat should not reasonably expect a high grade in return. Good flour depends fully as much on the farmer as on the miller.

DISGRACEFUL.—Yesterday a police officer was furnished with a warrant for the arrest of a little boy whose father keeps a cooperage near the foot of Yates street. In making the arrest he is said to have handled the child roughly and the mother interfered to protect it, when he turned upon her and, according to the report of several citizens in the neighborhood, assaulted and kicked her. The father then attempted to rescue his wife and child, and between them all the poor boy seemed in a fair way to be pulled to pieces, and screamed lustily while the fight was going. The husband went to a lawyer as soon as the affair was over and made arrangements for the prosecution of the officer.

A CALIFORNIA TRAGEDY.—At Santa Cruz on the 18th inst., a party was given at the house of the Fitch Brothers, grapegrowers. To the party came an unbidden guest—Dave Evans by name. During the evening one of the Fitches ordered him out. He did not go and later on one of the hosts placed the muzzle of a pistol against Evans' ear and blew his brains out. "My God!" exclaimed another of the Fitch brothers, "what have you done?" The murderer answered, "I did not intend to kill him," and quickly placing the muzzle of his pistol to his right ear, shot himself. Fitch lingered till daylight when he died.

DETENTION has occurred on the overland railway near Truckee through the burning of a snowshed on Friday. Two locomotives drawing fifteen cars entered the blazing structure before they were aware of the danger. The engines were burned and the engineers and some passengers severely scorched. The cars were cut loose from the engines and rolled out of the sheds.

PUGET SOUND.—A new townsite on Fidalgo Island is called Anticosti....Geo. W. Prescott of the Freeport Mills, died at San Francisco on Wednesday after a brief illness....The Intelligencer, now that local Indian names are the rage for steamships, thinks the City of Panama's name should be changed to Skyomish, and that of the Dakota to Stillaguamish.

THE balance sheets of the Consolidated Virginia and California mines to the date of the last dividend, published in the evening papers, shows the Consolidated Virginia carries over a gross surplus of $270,257 67 and California $324,868 06, after paying dividends. Of the bullion shipments of the present fiscal month, not one is included in the exhibit.

SHOT AND SHELL.—The Emma yesterday brought round from Esquimalt about 75 tons of shot and shell, to be shipped to England on the barque Prince Rupert.

CLINTON.—No one has been in lately from Horsefly Creek. The last time, one of the party sold $25 gold at Bates' for tools.

The Royal City is in the throes of a Municipal election to fill two vacancies.

An Indian has been committed for trial for breach of contract at the fisheries.

The Chinamen employed in Messrs. Finlayson & Lane's cannery struck work early yesterday morning. It appears that one of them, owing to some dispute about work, drew a knife on the foreman, when he was promptly knocked down, and then the whole Celestial covey fluttered off. After an hour or two the difficulty was arranged and work resumed. Even an hour or two's stoppage is a serious thing now-a-days, as the fish are running in such quantities as to push the canneries very hard. A fisherman told us yesterday morning that during the previous night he took 222 fish at one "drift"—that is, at one cast of the net.

SATURDAY, July 21st, 1877.

Patrick Murphy, a boy, summoned by Mary Gibbon, charged with having unlawfully assaulted her little child by throwing a stone and cutting her eye, not appearing in answer to his name, a warrant was issued for his arrest.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Last evening a large and enthusiastic audience assembled to witness the Hibernica, which was presented for the fifth time in Victoria. Many changes had been made in the programme. Miss Poinier's song "Killarney" was very beautifully rendered and was loudly encored. Barney was again a great favorite, especially in his plantation dance, and the song "Tread on the tail of me coat." But the greatest success of all was Harry Nicholson, the London champion comique, in his character of Robinson Crusoe, and on being encored gave his characteristic song of "Simple Simon," which was also encored. Mr. Howard caused great amusement in his German characters, being encored in several cases. In the afternoon there was a matinee which was largely attended. On Monday next there will be a grand entertainment with an entire change of programme under the patronage of His Honor the Lieut.-Governor and suite.

THE CABLE has been found to be seriously damaged. The repairers were at work yesterday. A few southern and northern dispatches were received by the Enterprise yesterday, having been transmitted by the mainland line to New Westminster, and we received one day's later dispatches in the afternoon from Lopez Island, they having been ferried across the break.

THE steamer Enterprise arrived at 12:30 p.m. yesterday from New Westminster with $18,000 in treasure, about 500 boxes of salmon for Messrs. Findlay, Durham & Brodie and the following passengers: Mrs. Hendry, Miss Williams, Miss Robbins, Rev. Mr. Tait, R. Stevenson, H. Williams, J. Lenihan, A. Bunster, F. Richter, Coulthard, Bole.

FIRE.—An alarm was given last evening about 9 o'clock that Muirhead & Mann's large planing mills were on fire. Flames were seen issuing from the chimney, but the fire was put out in a few moments after the arrival of the engines. The fire seems to have been confined to the chimney.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.—The highest cash price will be paid for Ladies', Gentlemen's and Children's wearing apparel at Haggerty's Store on Dufferin street. Parties desirous of discontinuing housekeeping can meet a cash buyer for all household effects by applying at the above address. .·.

EXPORTS.—Messrs. Oppenheimer Bros. shipped yesterday per steamer Dakota 229 bales of wool weighing 3300 lbs., and also 500 cases of salmon from Messrs. Finlayson & Lane of New Westminster for Messrs. Clements of San Francisco.

THE steamship Dakota left about 2 p. m. yesterday for San Francisco with the mails,, about $9000 in treasure and a few passengers.

FOOTRACE.—The footrace of 100 yards yesterday evening for $50 aside was won by Edward Irving; his competitor, Roberts, being well up at the finish.

No HOPE is now entertained of the recovery of Peter Calvert. He has not recovered consciousness since the accident.

COL. AND MRS. BRIGGS and daughter arrived by the Dakota on Friday evening from Port Townsend.

GUIDE TO THE PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.—This is the title of a neatly bound 8vo. volume, containing 412 pages of condensed information. The index in itself recommends it as an interesting book for perusal, both at home and abroad. The sweeping field of its local information leaves scarcely a topic of any interest unnoticed.

Aside from the Directories of all the different towns and districts throughout the Island and Mainland, the work compiles from the most intelligent sources all the industries, mineral wealth, and other natural resources, including the educational, political and religious status, etc., etc. This book will be invaluable to intending immigrants and everyone whose interests are identified with the Province, and will meet a want which has never before its issue been supplied.

The publishers sincerely thank those gentlemen who have so kindly aided them with their valuable contributions.

Esquimalt Regatta.

EDITOR COLONIST:—It is rumored that the surplus of $75 odd in the hands of the Committee is to be given the Esquimalt Church, and as such an appropriation would be contrary to the wishes of many subscribers to the regatta fund, I beg to suggest that the surplus should be placed in the Savings Bank, and next year, applied to its legitimate object, namely, the promotion of a regatta at Esquimal.

Your, obedient servant.

The Archdeacon's Synodical Sermon, and his Defence Thereof.

EDITOR COLONIST:—I have read Archdeacon Wright's letter and find in it some four or five propositions, with as many assumptions, conjectures, and personal judgments, but not one proof. If the Archdeacon will take counsel from me (though not of me) he will from this time, when he preaches a Synodical or other sermon, preach, not as a clergyman of the Church of England, but the truth according to the Scriptures. This the Church requires of him. This he promised. Why then, my brother, are the Scriptures just the one authority which you do not refer to? Who of the Apostles ever preached by the Archdeacon's rule? Not so was the Reformation established. How can the Church be reformed by preaching the immutability of the Church? It is just this rule which renders all reformation impossible. Therefore the Church, as if conscious of fallibility, guards herself against herself, by establishing the supremacy of the Scriptures. Those who make this the rule of their ministry are not schismatics, whoever else are. The Church in this land is free, bound by no act of parliament, or laws of ecclesiastical provinces. The orders of the Church of England are unlimited and universal. The presbyter and the Bishop receive authority to exercise their functions in "the Church of God," and no word of any other church added. Will the Archdeacon limit this authority? Does he not know that in pronouncing his personal judgment on certain acts, as "a miserable and sinful mockery," he condemns and invalidates the orders of the Church of England itself, and of its cognate churches on this continent? The Synod had liberty, for anything the Church of England would say to them to reform doctrines and ceremonies, as well as discipline. The first thing they did was to bind their own hands and feet with a girdle ecclesiastic. The Church is the congregation; the living, present body. (I recommend to the Archdeacon and all of the Church of England, in reference to this proposition, as well as others I have touched upon a perusal of Articles 19, 20, 21, 23 of the Church of England.) Such a church was here,—fully formed (and still exists)—her orders, notwithstanding the Archdeacon's personal judgment, sound; her doctrines professedly (and I believe really) those of the Reformation; before any ecclesiastical person of the Archdeacon's view appeared on the scene. We did not separate from the Church, but from ecclesiastical persons who sought unlawful authority over the Church.

With regard to the Archdeacon's personal judgment, and the language in which it is delivered, I cannot now, being in the country, but may at another time hold up to the Archdeacon the glass and plentiful pattern of it in some very modern utterances on this same continent from ecclesiastical lips and pens.

I am, dear sir,
Your obedient servant,
E. CRIDGE.

The Reply of Archdeacon Wright to "Layman"—A Challenge.

EDITOR COLONIST: — Any anonymous correspondent who may wish to attack me pray let him do so. I have the authority of old Homer that the attack will be harmless:

"A coward's weapon never hurts the brave."

Which being interpreted signifies that the poor creature, who when an honest and open contest is offered him, has not the courage to stand out boldly before the world and fight like a man—that sad example of humanity is unworthy of notice. Woe will be to him from whom such an offence comes.

Of course "Layman" desires to be strictly truthful. He may be mistaken—nay, he may be deluded, but we are bound to suppose him delicately conscientious. What then will be his feeling when I tell him that he never made a greater mistake in his life than when he identifies me with ultra-ritualists "who want to revive and force upon the Church obsolete practices;" who yearn for "chasubles, wax tapers," &c. Such wild thinkers may be much in earnest, but they do, I hold, increased harm to the good old Church of England. That is the way "Mr. Wright lately arrived from England" identifies himself with those who "magnify the office and power of the priesthood," and "threaten the disruption of the Established Church." Will "Layman" write me a little note and say "Dear Archdeacon: I am indeed sorry that I have spoken evil of you?" I trow not. Surely then "it was a great mistake on his part to endeavor to make capital by deprecatory allusions" for he sadly neglected those warning words "woe be to those from whom offences come."

With respect to the Cummins schism and those who in Victoria have joined it I have nothing more to say than this. Let the matter be put to the test I solemnly and deliberately declare that Bishop Cummins having been deposed, while he may have been truly conscientious, was as judged by the Church of England a deluded disturber of unity, a melancholy example of schism-working. That he had no power to consecrate a bishop and that in attempting to do so he was guilty of a sad and dangerous error. Further I declare that the result of such attempt was no more a true Bishop than I am Lord Chancellor and that no Bishop of the Church of England in any part of the world would receive him as a brother. From the Archbishop of Canterbury down to the last consecrated Prelate, one and all would declare him a schismatic.

Such is my deliberate assertion, and if on reference to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of Montreal, the Bishop of Oregon, the Bishop of California, any Bishop of Australia, New Zealand or the Cape of Good Hope, one solitary Bishop will say that my declaration is not true I will give "Layman" one hundred dollars for the use of any charity in which he may be interested. My once old friend and brother priest, Edward Cridge, all whose real goodness I still respect, accused me in his long letter of questioning his position and doing him serious wrong. I have now in self-defence spoken out plainly and honestly and I trust kindly. I have given my reasons why neither he nor any other minister of this Cummins movement is a Bishop, nor even an approach to a Bishop. I have promised one hundred dollars to any one will find a single Bishop of the Church of England ready to receive my once old and respected friend as a brother Prelate. What can I say more? Only one thing—"From all false doctrine, heresy and schism may the Lord deliver us."

H. P. WRIGHT,
Archdeacon of Vancouver Island.

July 21st, 1877.

P. S.—I may observe that Bishop Cummins was on the 24th June, 1874, "deposed to all intents and purposes from the ministry and from all the rights, privileges, powers and dignities pertaining to the office of Bishop." H. P. W.

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

[By Canoe Line from Swinomish to San Juan Island.]

EUROPE.

VIENNA, July 19.—The Political Correspondence denies that any superior Russian functionary has arrived or expected in Vienna on a special mission from the Czar.

VIENNA, July 19. — A correspondent telegraphs that the 45 battalions of Russians have crossed the Balkans. It remains to be seen whether Suliman Pasha will arrive in time to bar their further progress. Suleiman's force number 18,000 to 20,000 He will endeavor to hold the Russians in check to enable Osman Pasha from advancing and Abdul Kerim from Shumla will fall upon their rear, Abdul Kerim holding himself in readiness to assume offensive at first convenient opportunity.

A private telegram announces that a battle has already began. Rooof Pasha who at first believed he had repulsed the main body of Russians on the other side of the Balkans merely drove back a small body sent against him as a feint, while the bulk of the army passed on.

LONDON, July 19.—A dispatch dated Constantinople, Wednesday night, says the Ottoman army on the Danube commenced offensive opperations to-day.

VIENNA, July 19—Relative to reports of excitement in Hungray it is stated the success of Russia cannot make Austria in any way change her attitude. The Hungerian press violently demands immediate intervention; but in leading quarters in Vienna there is no intention to yield to any such demand.

NEW YORK, July 19.—A special from London says it is expected in Austrian capitol that Turkish and Astrian between Rustchuk and Shumla commenced a battle yesterday morning which lasted several hours. Losses of both sides were very heavy and the fighting was of the most desperate character, and the result is as yet unknown.

Still Later.

EUROPE.

LONDON, July 19.—A correspondent of the Times at Bucharest sends the following:—Rustchuk appears to be completely surrounded, but we have no news as yet of the commencement of siege operations. When the blockade of Rustchuk is complete so that its garrison cannot interfere with the Dubrudscha column it is expected here that this Russian force will envelop Silistria. It is officially announced that the Russians were in possession of the whole line of the Chernavado and Kustendji railway, the Turks having evacuated and partly burned Chernavoda. Various despatches represent that the movement on Yeli Saghra was a feint and the real movement directed towards the station farther south where the Russians have concentrated army corps under orders to proceed at once to Adrianople. It is calculated that the Turkish forces not already locked up in the Danubian fortresses do not exceed one hundred thousand, and that Grand Duke Nicholas has sufficient force at Tirnova to prevent their interfering with the movement on Adrianople.

A Paric correspondent states: Count Schouvaloff, in consequence of the bad impression produced by recent accounts of Russian atrocities, has sent an urgent telegram to Gortschakoff begging him to give the principle foreign correspondents every facility for visiting places named as scenes of such excess.

The last news from Constantinople is that the Russians having taken Kazoulik are marching on Philippopolis,

A special from Nikopolis says 50,000 Russians are advancing from Nikopolis towards Widden to besiege the fortress and prevent the advance of the Turkish troops.

English naval officers on leave in Constantinople from Besika Bay have been recalled.

A despatch dated Athens, Thursday evening, says the public mind is much agitated. The students have sent an address to the King asking him to declare war against the Turks. The situation is critical. Volunteers are taking up arms.

A special from Elena says on Wednesday Gen. Gurka, who came throug Tivardizka pass, immediately after passing through turned westward and marched on Rozanlik. Reports received to-day state that his advanced detachments are already in Kozanlik. Numbers of prisoners are engaged in widening Tivardizka pass, which will be practicable for the transport of vehicles in two days. Already batteries of field artillery have gone through. Gen. Gourke keeps his communication quite open with his base at Tiernova.

Victoria Municipal Pound Bylaw.

WE, the Mayor and Councillors in Council convened by virtue of the power and authority vested in us by an Act entitled "The Victoria Municipal Ordinance, 1867," and the "Victoria Municipal Amendment Ordinance, 1869."

Whereas, it is expedient for the good government of the City of Victoria, that a City Pound be established for the impounding of Swine, Goats, Horses, Horned Cattle and Dogs found at large or straying within the limits of the said city, and that such animals be declared a nuisance, and disposed of as such.

Be it thereof enacted by the Mayor and Councillors of the said City of Victoria, as follows:

1. That a Public Pound shall be established by the Mayor and Council for impounding of Swine, Goats, Horses, Horned Cattle and Dogs, and a Pound Keeper from time to time by them appointed who, subject to the approval of the Mayor and Council of the said city, shall be at liberty to appoint in writing one or more Deputy or Deputies.

2. That from and after the passing of this By Law all Swine, Goats, Horses, Bulls and Steers, and Dogs found at large or straying in any public way, street, thoroughfare or unenclosed land within the City limits, shall be deemed a nuisance and may be dealt with as hereinafter provided.

3. The Council may from time to time define the limits by resolution duly passed within which Cows may graze without being liable to be thereby impounded.

4. All animals so found at large or straying as aforesaid, may be taken by the Pound Keeper or his Deputy or Deputies, who shall impound the same in the City Pound.

5. A book shall be kept in which shall be entered, with all due speed, a true and faithful record of the number of the animals impounded, where they were found at large or straying; also of the date of their receipt, and the date and manner of their disposal; and if sold, the name, address and addition of each purchaser.

6. Every animal so impounded as aforesaid, shall forthwith be advertised by notice in writing posted at a conspicuous place on the Pound gate, and also at the office of the Clerk of the said Municipal Council, in which notice shall be stated a reasonable description of the animals and the date and hour of the impounding, and such notice shall be kept so posted for the space of three days.

7. All animals impounded shall be properly housed and shall be furnished with all necessary sustenance whilst so impounded; but no animal shall be fed until six hours after impounding.

8. A Fine not exceeding the sum of Two Dollars may be levied or collected on or in respect of each animal impounded, and a further reasonable sum for the sustenance of such animal after such period of six hours not exceeding in the case of each Pig, Goat, or Dog, the sum of twenty-five cents, and in the case of each Horse or Horned Cattle so impounded, the sum of fifty cents per day, each day or part of a day such animal shall be or continue so impounded, may be levied or collected thereon or in respect thereof, in lieu and in satisfaction of all charges for the housing and sustenance thereof.

9. That in case any injury or damage be done by any animals, which are hereby prohibited from running at large to any person or to any property sufficiently enclosed, the cattle when impounded shall not be released until the amount of damage claimed by the owner or occupier of the property damaged shall be deposited with the Poundkeeper in addition to the fees herein mentioned.

10. In case the amount claimed for damage shall be more than the owner of the animals impounded think right, the amount of such damage shall be referred to the Mayor who shall appoint a person to value and estimate the damage done, and the costs of such valuation, not exceeding Three Dollars, shall be paid by the losing party.

11. In case no dispute shall arise as to the amount of damage, or in case the same is settled as aforesaid, then the Poundkeeper is to pay over to the owner or occupier of the property injured the amount in his hands after deducting the Fees hereby made payable.

12. The owner of any animal impounded may at any time prior to the sale or other disposition thereof, as hereinafter provided, have the same released on payment to the Clerk of the Municipal Council of the fines, charges and expenses chargeable thereon under the authority of this Bylaw; or, in the case of Dogs, the amount of the rate or tax payable thereon for the current year when impounded, together with the charges for the sustenance, as aforesaid.

13. On payment of the monies referred to in the last preceding section of this By-Law, an order in writing for the discharge of the animal on account of which the payment shall have been made, signed by the Clerk of the said Municipal Council, shall be given to the person making the payment, and on delivering such order to the Pound Keeper or one of his Deputies, the animal therein referred to shall be released.

14. Every animal so impounded as aforesaid, which shall not have been released within seven days from the day on which it shall have been advertised as aforesaid, may be offered for sale by Public Auction at the place and time in manner hereinafter appointed and shall be sold to the highest bidder, who shall thereupon become the absolute owner thereof, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

15. Public Auctions for the sale of animals to be sold under the authority of this By-Law shall be held at the City Pound on Wednesday and Saturday in each week, at the hour of twelve o'clock at noon, or at such other place or time as the said Municipal Council, by notice signed by the Clerk of the said Council and posted in a conspicuous place on the Pound Gate, and advertised in one of the daily newspapers published and circulated in the said City, for the space of one calendar month, shall from time to time previously appoint; and no such animal shall be sold except at such auction; and such sales shall be conducted by the Pound Keeper, or his Deputy or Deputies, or one of them, or such other person or persons as the said Municipal Council shall from time to time appoint.

16. The proceeds of every such sale as aforesaid shall be applied as follows: In the first place as Municipal Revenue in or towards paying, satisfying and discharging the fines, charges, rates, taxes, sums and expenses imposed or authorized to be levied or collected under this By-Law, and the balance (if any) of such proceeds shall be carried to an account in the Books of the said Municipal Council for use of the owner of such animal, subject as herein mentioned.

17. All monies held by the said Municipal Council for the use of the owner of any animal sold under the authority of this By-Law, shall be deemed to be and shall be forfeited to the said Mayor and Council if such person shall not establish his claim thereto within six calendar months from the day on which such animal shall have been impounded.

18. The payment of any monies authorized to be levied or collected under the authority of this By-Law, and the release of any dogs which may be impounded, shall not exempt or release the owner or owners of such dog from the payment of the penalty imposed by either of the said By-Laws for raising the Revenue aforesaid.

19. If any Dog shall be offered for sale under this By-Law, by public auction, and shall not be sold, such dog shall be destroyed or otherwise disposed of, as the said Mayor, by writing under his hand, shall direct.

20. If the money to arise on the sale of any animal as aforesaid shall not be sufficient to satisfy the amount which shall have been chargeable thereon, or in the case of dogs, if any dog shall be destroyed under the authority of this By-Law, the amount due to the Corporation of the said City in respect of the animal which shall have been sold or destroyed shall be deemed a penalty, and shall be recoverable from the owner of the said animal under the XL. Section of the "Victoria Municipal Ordinance, 1867," and under the provisions of the "Victoria Municipal Amendment Ordinance, 1869."

21. This By-Law may be cited for all purposes as the "Victoria City Pound By-Law, 1877."
